Excerpt from The London Guide, and Stranger s Safeguard Against the Cheats, Swindlers, and Pickpockets That Abound Within the Bills of Mortality: Forming a Picture of London, as Regards Active Life; Collected From the Verbal Communications of William Perry, and Others; To Which Is Added an Exposition of the Late Atrocities of Conspirators and Informers; And a Glossary of Cant Terms To supply the place of a living find, and in some eases to perform the necessary part of one, by directing the stranger in the choice of companions, and what characters he should avoid, I have compiled these sheets; in which will he found all I know about the matter, and all could learn out by fine-draw ing of others. In this work I have obtained the assistance of an Author by profession, who will new write it mostly all over. The gentleman will put all of it in order, fit to be read, and add a word or two, or a line or two, here and there, when I am out. This is but fair and proper, considering as I am not much used to the pen, I might make a pretty kettle of fish of it so, I cares not, not I, says I to the gentleman as employs us both, its all one to me, though he should strike out every word; for, as for me, as I mean to out with it all, he may put it down in what lingo he likes. This is all I shall say of my own accord, seeing I am willing to make amends for my past life, by disclosing such secrets as never were made public before, not upon paper; and...
